This conference offers a timely and much needed forum to bring together practitioners, academics, researchers, students and others with a keen interest in the area of education, mental health and wellbeing.

A broad and dynamic programme will provide the opportunity for delegates to learn about recent research on self-harm in primary school children, innovative psychoeducation interventions for at-risk' and socially excluded young people, and novel approaches to support teacher wellbeing, among many other stimulating topics.

Sinead McBrearty (CEO, Education Support Partnership) is the keynote and the conference is designed to be interactive and participatory: it will include round table presentations and discussion sessions on key themes, a panel and Q & A (chaired by Dr Sveta Mayer, Youth Mental Health and First Aid Programme Researcher, UCL). There will also be oral and poster presentations from education researchers across a range of settings.

If you are passionate about contributing to the education agenda and translating research to practice this conference is for you - Come and join the conversation!
